How Watch Cases are Made.

The many great improvements introduced in the manufacture of the Jas. Boss' Gold Watch Case, have led to similar improvements in the making of silver cases.

Under the old methods, each part of a silver case was made of several pieces of metal soldered together, requiring a great amount of cutting and soldering, which softened the metal and gave it the pliability of lead rather than the elasticity of silver.

Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one solid piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily apparent, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it.

To test the superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, take one of 3 oz. weight, press it squarely in the center when closed, and it will not give, while a case of same weight of any other make will give enough to crack the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and gold joints.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome illustrated Pamphlet showing how Jas. Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

Bulwer Lytton's Bridge.

WHERE IT TOUCHES THE SHORES AND THE GREAT COLUMNS IN MIDSTREAM.

"What a beautiful bridge between old age and childhood is religion. How intuitively the child begins with prayer and worship on entering life, and how intuitively, on quitting life, the old man turns back to prayer and worship, putting himself again side by side with the infant," remarks Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, in his "Strange Story."

Yes, but between its distant abutments the bridge of life has many high and awful arches, through which the wild waters dash and roar in wrath and disolution. Prayer and worship alone do not sustain these. Nature's solid rocks must lie unshaken beneath, and human art and skill must rear and solidify the structure overhead. God's will is best exemplified in the laws He has made for the creatures whom He has placed under their control. Neither the child's trustful "our Father," nor the old man's "Forget me not in the midst of nine infirmities," will alter this by the weight of a single grain.

Science and art first—then faith and prayer—is the order of Heaven itself. Divinity heals through its agents, and those agents are the discoveries of man; not the vague announcements of prophets or seers. Is life a burden to you? Does indigestion drag? Is your power to cope with life's problem and duties weakened? You are not well. Your blood is sluggish and tainted, perhaps; or some important organ is torpid or overworked. This fact may have taken the form of dyspepsia, rheumatism, gout, malaria, pains in the stomach, chronic headache, or any of a dozen other ills. PARKER'S TONIC will invigorate you, as fresh air invigorates those who have been shut up in damp, fetid cells. It is powerful, pure, delicious, sure, safe—the keystone of the central arch of the bridge of life.

Analysis by Dr. A. Voelcker, F. R. S., Consulting Chemist Royal Agricultural Society, England, shows only a trace of nitrates in Blackwell's Bull Durham Tobacco. The soil of the Golden Belt of North Carolina, in which this tobacco is grown, don't supply nitrates to the leaf. That is the secret of its delicious mildness. Nothing so pure and luxurious for smoking. Don't forget the brand. None genuine without the trademark of the Bull. All dealers have it.

SELECT STORY.

THE HEIRESS.

"I dont think he cares two straws for me," thought Elsie Miller, pulling the withered roses out of her hair with a quick, impatient little jerk. "And he used to be so different. Oh, dear! talk about the fickleness of woman. Men are twenty times as unaccountable. But I don't care one particle."

And, in undeniable proof of her indifference, the round, bright drops rolled down her fresh, pink cheeks, and her lip quivered.

Elsie was a pretty, piquant little damsel, with eyes as blue as china marbles, a complexion like a damask rose, and bright tendrils of silken hair, partaking decidedly of the reddish hue, greatly to our heroine's daily dissatisfaction.

"Nobody has red hair in all my novels," said Elsie, almost ready to despair.

Aunt Bridget Merriam had brought Elsie up until she stood on the threshold of her seventeenth year—brought her up in a kindly, old-fashioned sort of a way, to knit and sew, and to make her own fresh little merino dresses, and stitch her own spotless linen collars.

"For there's no knowing what tribulation a body may have to pass through in the world, Elsie," said the old lady solemnly; "and it's always just as well to be able to turn hand to almost anything. I've lived sixty and seven years, and I've found out that Heaven helps those who helps themselves."

So Elsie unconsciously proved herself for a stormy future, brightening up whatever weapons nature had given for that battle with the world which Aunt Bridget appeared to consider almost inevitable. And when Aunt Bridget died suddenly; and she was left alone, poor Elsie thought vaguely of dressmaking, school teaching, copying—all the make shifts by which women now-a-days contrive to stave off the wolf's footsteps from their doors.

"This is a very unexpected stroke of providence, Miss Miller," said Mr. Peck, the solemn faced lawyer.

"Yes, sir, indeed it is," said Elsie, sadly, think how lonely the house would be without Aunt Bridget's brisk step, and aged, kindly face.

"But we must all be prepared to meet the dispensation of a higher wisdom than ours," he added.

"Yes, sir," said Elsie, wishing he would stop talking in that sanctimonious whine, and tell her whether she had better accept the situation as teacher to the district school, or go as governess to Squire Dalton's six motherless little girls.

"And we, none of us suspected for an instant that our dear departed friend was worth fifty thousand dollars.

"Fifty thousand dollars!" Elsie opened her china-blue eyes widely enough now.

"Exactly that sum, my dear Miss Miller—and she has been—been pleased to testify her confidence in my—ha—humble abilities, by constituting me your guardian until you reach the age of twenty one years. Allow me—hum—to proffer my most cordial congratulations.

How Mr. Peck wished his Freddy was twenty instead of ten years of age!

"For," he inwardly reasoned, stroking his lank, bristly chin, "she's sure to fall a victim to some fortune hunter or other. And she's such a fool."

But Mr. Peck was mistaken in that last estimate Elsie Miller was no fool.

Gervaise Colton heard the story of Miss Miller's good fortune in silence.

"I am glad you told me," he said to his informant, Squire Dalton. "I was going there this very evening, to ask Elsie if she would accept a home at my hands."

"Do you mean marry, marry you?" demanded the straightforward squire.

"Certainly—of course."

"My dear boy, you couldn't do a more sensible thing. You'll have the richest wife and the prettiest wife in town, and I always thought that little Elsie fancied you. Go, by all means."

"Never!" said Gervaise, emphatically.

"Hallo!" cried the squire, dropping the red silk handkerchief that he was flourishing about and staring fixedly about at the handsome young man opposite him.

"I would sooner cut my right hand off than give people occasion to call me a fortune-hunter," said Colton, with quiet determination that made his mouth look like iron, his words like adamant.

"Gammon!" said the squire, rather uncourteously; "didn't you just tell me you were about to propose to her, under the impression that she hadn't a penny in the world?"

"Yes I told you so, and it was the truth—it would be rather difficult to convince the world in general of it."

"Oh, bother the world in general! What do you care for its verdict one way or the other?"

But Colton shook his head.

"I have striven all my life long to be an honorable gentleman," said he calmly—"nor shall I allow the shadow of a shade to dim my character now. I love Elsie Miller as truly and tenderly as a man can love, but I will not submit to be called an heiress-hunter!"

"But, my dear boy, please reflect that the days of Don Quixote are over. Nobody will appreciate the sacrifice you are making; and Elsie herself will probably marry some calculating merchant or other, who won't make half so good a husband to her as you would have done."

Gervaise Colton remained obstinately unconvinced, however, and the squire's eloquence was utterly thrown away.

And little Elsie? How she marvelled at Gervaise's altered manner—at his cold constraint and distant politeness; what scalded tears she cried into her midnight pillow, and how vainly she tried to read the unreadable riddle.

"I'm sure he used to like me," said Elsie, as she bathed her eyes with rose-water in the mornings. "And there's the rosebuds he gave me just before Aunt Bridget died, and the letters he used to write, and—and—"

So ended most of Miss Elsie's soliloquies—in tears.

"But I don't care!" persisted our heroine.

The months passed away, and still Gervaise adhered to his new role of distant, courteous friend, and one night Elsie resolved to ask him what she had done to forfeit the whole place in his heart.

So she marched up to him, in the merry confusion of good Squire Dalton's birthday party—a resolute little soldier, in armor of white muslin and shield of roses.

Gervaise was leaning sadly against the door, listening abstractedly to the music, when Elsie laid her boquet of roses lightly on his arm.

"Gervaise!"

He started.

"Miss Miller!"

"Miss Miller," she repeated, bitterly. "Oh! Gervaise—you used to call me Elsie once. Why are you so cold—so changed? What have I done to lose your friendship?"

"Nothing," he answered, strangely embarrassed.

"Gervaise!"

"Will you excuse me, he said, hurriedly. I see a friend to whom I must speak."

Elsie stood with her cheeks flaming like the roses in her hand, and her blue eyes humid with tears. Had she humiliated herself in vain?

And this was the night she went home and declared for at least the hundred and ninety-ninth time, that "she didn't care."

"I cannot endure this," thought Gervaise Colton. "I shall forget dignity, manhood, resolution and every thing else if she looks me in the eyes like that once again. Oh, Miss Bridget Merriam's fifty thousand dollars could be thrown into the sea!"

All that night Gervaise spent in packing his valise, burning old letters, and setting his affairs in order for a journey.

"I may as well go out West," he thought. "It's a wild place and a lonely place, and I shall be safe from the besetting demand of temptation only there. I may surely keep this bunch of dried violets that she gave me the day of the picnic; she will never know."

Alas, there was little of consolation in that last reflection.

"Ought I to write and bid her good-by?" he pondered, with an indescribable yearning, for the one last link to bridge over the dividing currents of their lives. "No, I must leave her free, unfettered even by a fancy."

Gervaise Colton sat underneath the swinging lamp of the express train as it thundered through the midnight solitudes, with folded arms, and sleepless staring eyes. He was leaving hope, happiness, sunshine, behind him forever.

Oh, why had Providence made the path of duty so narrow, and so beset by prickly thorns? Why must he fight such a perpetual battle with himself? Would it not be better to die at once?

As the vague, repining aspiration after the peace and oblivion of death came across his mind, there was a crash—a jar—a noise like the rendering of beams and splintering of arches—and Gervaise Colton was thrown violently against the side of the car, with a concussion that for a few moments deprived him of sense of consciousness. Then he struggled up, sick and faint, into a sitting position, and became aware that he was surrounded by dead and dying.

The train had run off the track, and the three foremost cars were precipitated into a sort of gorge or declivity some seven or eight feet deep, just beyond. Gervaise Colton had wished for death—here it was, face to face with him. No wonder that he shrank appalled from the gastly sight.

Steadying himself by the broken seat, he rose to his feet, convincing himself that he was not seriously hurt, beyond a bruise or two, and began to assist his less fortunate fellow travelers.

Almost directly behind him had sat a man in a slouched hat and muffled face; he lay now beneath a mass of splintered woodwork and shivered glass.

"It's no use," he groaned feebly, as Gervaise dragged away the superincumbent weight, and tried to lift him up; "I'm dying fast; there's an ugly gash on the back of my head that all the surgeons in creation couldn't close up again. Let me die in peace."

"Why, it is Jonathan Peck!" exclaimed Gervaise, recognizing the lawyer's voice, husky and faint though it was.

"Yes, Gervaise Colton, it is I," faltered the dying man. "Go back to Elsie Miller and tell her she is penniless once more. I have risked her fortune in railroad shares, and lost it; but if I had succeeded—and they looked promising—I should have doubled it for her. I was on my way to Europe. I dared not look her in the face, and tell her what I am telling you. But it is all over now. God will judge me more charitable than man would have done; and I meant well indeed—indeed—indeed, I meant well. For—"

There was a choking sort of gurgle in his throat—a rush of crimson blood over his lips—and the next moment Gervaise Colton was holding a dead man's head upon his knee.

* * * * * * *

Lost! My fortune all lost! Stop a moment, Gervaise, and let me collect my thoughts—my head is growing dizzy, I think.

Elsie Miller had cared as little for the money glitter of wealth as woman could, and yet this shock came to her sharp and sudden. No more luxury, no more indolent indulgences, no more day dreams. She must turn once more to the hard, dusty high-road of work-day life; and oh! how lonely and desolate she felt in the contemplation of that new existence.

"Oh, Gervaise, Gervaise, what shall I do?"

The words broke almost involuntarily from her parched lips; there was an imploring gleam in her blue eyes.

"I will tell you, Elsie," he said, gently taking both of her cold, fluttering hands in his. "Trust yourself to me—give your future into my care. And may Heaven be my judge if ever I fail in the charge it has committed to me!"

"Gervaise—I—I am a little bewildered by this strange, sudden calamity, and I do not quite understand you."

"I love you, Elsie—I would fain make you my wife. That should surely be plain enough," he said fondly.

"But my money is all gone. I am poor as the beggars on yonder pavement."

"I rejoice that it is gone, Elsie. Your wealth has been a barrier between us long enough—now I may dare to speak out what has been in my heart for years. Thank God that you are poor, Elsie."

"Oh, Gervaise, how cruelly you have misjudged."

"That's not the question, Elsie," he answered, tenderly. "Will you be my wife? Will you give me the right to care for you and protect you always?"

She laid her hot cheek upon his shoulder.

"I have loved you Gervaise, as long and as faithfully as you have loved me." The barrier was broken down at last, and heart met heart.

"I am poor to-night," said Elsie, half-jestingly, as she sat in the twilight with her hand close-imprisoned in Gervaise's tender clasp, "but I think I am richer than I have ever been before."

She was an heiress no longer—she was only plain little Elsie Miller; yet how unspeakably precious in Gervaise Colton's eyes!

And Jotham Peck might have rested easier in his dishonest grave, knowing that he was forgiven!

Geo. Bliss' Wages.

"What was your entire charge?"

"$59,532. Of this amount $4,342 was for expenses. About $8,000 of it is still unpaid.

"Gibson says you got $150 a day.

"That is not true. My bills covered greater periods than he reckoned."

"How many men did you convict?" asked Representative Fyan.

"Only two."

"Were they punished?"

"No, sir."

"Would you charge for Sunday?" Mr. Springer inquired.

"I think my bills show that I charged for Sunday. I know I worked on Sundays."

"Whose fault do you think it was that there was no convictions?" asked Fyan.

"I think it was the fault of the jury, sir."

Continuing, Bliss said: "I say distinctly that I never charged more than $100 a day except possibly when the trial was being conducted. I would consider it a mighty poor day in New York when I don't get $100."—Star Route Investigation.

Congressman-at-Large.

THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE.

General W. W. H. Davis, of Doylestown, Bucks county, who was nominated by the Democratic state convention for congressman-at-large, is a son of the late General John Davis, who was a noted Democrat in his life time. He was surveyor of the port of Philadelphia during the administration of President Polk. His son was a student in the law department of Howard University at Cambridge, Mass., when the Mexican war broke out. He cast aside his law books, enlisted as a private in Colonel Caleb Cushing's Massachusetts regiment, of which he was appointed adjutant, and served to the close of the war.

SECRETARY OF NEW MEXICO.

In 1853 he was appointed secretary of New Mexico by President Polk, and for a considerable time was acting governor of that territory. Upon his return to Pennsylvania he purchased the Doylestown Democrat, in 1857, and ever since has been the editor and proprietor of that influential paper. When the rebellion broke out in 1861 he raised the 104th regiment, of which he became colonel, and was subsequently promoted to a brigadier generalship for gallant and meritorious service. In one of the many engagements in which he participated, he lost four fingers of the right hand. In 1865 he was the Democratic candidate for auditor general, but was defeated by Governor Hartranft.

AGAIN DEFEATED.

In 1882 he was the Democratic candidate for congress in the Bucks-Montgomery district, and was defeated by only a few votes. General Davis is an able lawyer, writer and speaker, and beside his editorial labors has contributed several valuable papers to the historical society of Pennsylvania. His personal appearance is very striking; slender and straight as an arrow, his bearing is that of a soldier. He is a captivating man in the social circle, and is held in the highest esteem by all who know him. His age is about sixty years. He is a brother-in-law of Chief Justice Mercur, of the supreme court, the latter having married the general's sister.

It is said that the claimant, Sir Roger, is to adopt the stage as a profession on his release from Portland prison, which will now shortly take place. The first character in which he will appear is Sir John Falstaff. He was to have been installed in a public house, but it was felt he had enough of trial at bar already.

Strychnine having been called the "medicine for alcoholism," an over enthusiastic French writer demands that the Government compel the introduction of a small quantity of the drug into all of the alcohol likely to be used for liquors. His notion is to render it harmless as a beverage. Dr. Dujardin-Beaumatz, in the Bulletin de Therapeutique, shows that the wholesale doctoring of this kind would not do. He also points out the important fact that while strychnine is an excellent remedy in delirium tremens, it is of no value whatever in alcoholism.

Western doctors say that some of their medical colleges are so greatly in want of students that the so-called preliminary examinations are a mere farce. It seems that last autumn a young man, after paying his advance fees to a medical institution, desired to attend another college, and requested that his money be returned. This being refused, the youth determined to display great ignorance at the preliminary examination, and out of twenty-five questions put to him, answered but three correctly. Certain of his rejection, he called upon the dean next day for his money. He was informed, however, with great affability, that his examination had been entirely satisfactory. The college cashed the claim only after a lawsuit threatened.

An Indianapolis man, who claims to know, says that an iron girder will lose its stiffness under a heat which would not ignite on an oak beam.

No Death for Over Thirty Years.

Since the first settlement of Fort Ross, Ponoma county, now over thirty years, with a population averaging from 50 to 100, there has never been a death in the place. The hotel is the old residence of the Russian commandante, built a generation before gold was first discovered in California; its floors are made of great redwood planks, six inches thick, and the great beams, groined rafters, and vast iron hinges, reaching clear across the door, give the place quite a dungeon-like appearance. The octagon block-houses, pierced for cannon, with the quaint old chapel, from which once a chime of bells summoned a strange people to their devotions are tangible remembrances of a population here, now almost prehistoric. These people selected a place of marvelous beauty and intrinsic merit, having a nice little harbor in which they build their ships in safety, and a bench of a thousand acres of fertile land, skirted by dense forests of redwood, rising from the valley to the height of 2000 feet, all watered by copious springs and rivulets, to make up its salient features. The old redwood stockade, which has been in the ground seventy years, is nearly as sound as when first made, and several logs have been taken from this place to England to show the durability of the wood. The other great merit of redwood is that it sprouts from the stump and thus renews itself; it is thought to be the only evergreen tree that has that quality. When the Russians cut the redwoods sixty years ago the new trees that have sprouted from the stumps are about three feet in diameter. —[San Francisco Alta.

Singeing the Hair.

THE LATEST CRAZE IN THE TONSORIAL LINE.

"Yes," said a Monroe street barber, as he quickly tossed a blazing gas jet over the head of the customer, singeing the hair off as accurately as it could have been clipped by a pair of scissors, "the latest craze in the tonsorial art is the singeing process. The method usually adopted in large shops is to use a movable drop light. The comb is passed through the hair, and the ends are burned off by the flame of gas, which is turned down low."

"What is the particular benefit claimed to be derived from this process?"

"It is claimed that it prevents the hair from changing color, and restores to its original color faded and colorless hair. So popular has the singeing process become that every first class barber-shop is prepared to remove hair either by the scissors or by burning. It is claimed that in singeing the hair the ends are hermetically sealed, thus preventing the escape of the vital principle, or fluid of the hair at the ends, just as the sealing of a

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, APRIL 25, 1884.

The 306ers with their medals around their necks, will prove to be a mill stone about Blaine's neck at Chicago.

President Arthur's chances for renomination are not hopeful. His own state will send a delegation to Chicago, the majority of which will vote against him.

John Coyle was hanged at Gettysburg on Tuesday for the murder of a girl. Great efforts were made to secure a respite on the ground of unsound mind, but after full consideration the governor refused to interfere.

The famous 306 should not forget to take their medals to Chicago with them, so that when they have succeeded the second time in defeating Blaine they can form a prosession and march through the streets with a brass band, wearing their medals about their necks.

Governor Pattison has been making informal visits to the several institutions under the care of the state. His visits are unannounced so that no opportunity is given to put things in proper order for inspection. At some of the institutions everything has not been found entirely satisfactory.

The Republican party asks to be kept in power, because it is the party of great moral ideas, the party that protects American industries, the party of progress and humanity. The Democratic party proposes to turn their opponents out because under the administrations of the past twenty years the republican party has trodden down the principles of civil service reform, has fostered such frauds as the Credit Mobilier, the Star route robberies, the Belknap post tradership; has stolen the Presidency through the corruption of a partisan tribunal, and has constantly legislated in the interest of monopolies and against the laboring classes. The people want a change.

The Philadelphia Times is booming Grant again for President. It says:

"The predictions made in these columns as to Grant's availability in December last, are fully vindicated now. The third term prejudice perished as soon as Grant retired from the political field, and abandoned all effort to climb to that exceptional honor. And as the prejudices of the desperate contest of 1880 are effaced, Grant grows stronger and greater as a central figure in American politics; and there are now thousands turning to him as a refuge from the wrangles of small men, who resolutely resisted the machine third term crusade of 1880.

Grant's chief strength as a candidate is like Blaine's—in not being, or in not appearing to be, a candidate. He has quietly pursued his business and pleasure, and his brief utterances at times, have proved that retirement has mellowed his resentments and greatly broadened him as a philosopher and a statesman. From being the distinct representative of a distrusted faction, as he was four years ago, he is now singularly free from entanglements and, if returned to the Presidency, would enter it more independent in surroundings and purpose than could any of the other candidates."

Prudence that May be Dangerous.

If the nomination of Blaine is one of the political probabilities, the New York Evening Post is pursuing a course poorly calculated to aid the success of its party, by republishing the old charges against the Maine statesman as a member of congress and as speaker of the house, among which the Mulligan transaction is not the least conspicuous. The freshening up of the facts connected with Blaine's profligate political career, by a republican journal of such standing as the Evening Post, could not fail to have a damaging effect upon his prospects in the event of his nomination. But doubtless that paper believes that a greater degree of prudence can be shown by interposing those charges as a bar to his nomination than by remaining silent in the preliminary stages of the contest and running the risk of the damage that would unavoidably follow from his unsavory reputation after he should once be fastened on the party as its candidate. It is reasonable to believe that the same consideration induces Harper's Weekly and other republican journals of repute to publish elaborate articles in which the imprudence of nominating a political character like Blaine is distinctly portrayed.

The popularity which the Mulligan statesman has developed among the rank and file of the party, springing from a sentiment that is real although misplaced, is a factor in the republican presidential problem that is giving the thoughtful and better portion of the party a great deal of concern. Possessing the attractive qualities that belong to consummate demagogueism, he has succeeded in enlisting the sympathies of the larger part of the mass of his party, which feeling has been strengthened by the relief that he has been made the victim of unfair treatment by party managers who are not popular with the average class of republican voters. This has been demonstrated whenever an opportunity to express their preference has not been interfered with by the management of cooler heads capable of comprehending the fact that his nomination would be an invitation to defeat.

Pennsylvania furnishes the most striking instance of the Blaine mania, and it was only by the superior manipulation of those who are opposed to him either for personal reasons or from a conviction that his nomination would insure the defeat of the party, that it was so managed that a full delegation will not go to Chicago howling for "the plumed knight." If he is defeated in the convention, which the more considerate leaders will make every effort to have done, it will be at the risk of offending his devoted followers who will count it as another injustice to their favorite by an influence unpopular with them and which they will be disposed to resent at the election. If he should succeed in making the nomination republican papers like the New York Evening Post, Harper's Weekly and others of equal repute, are already publishing the reasons why his election to the presidency would be alike dangerous and disgraceful to the country.—Patriot.

Judge Black's Room.

From the Lancaster Intelligencer.

The old home of Judge Black, near York, Pa., is kept just as he left it. In the library even the lead pencils with which he was accustomed to write with his left hand lie on the table, just as he laid them down, no change being made in the furniture, except that a picture of the Judge has been put on the wall and a bust, as yet only in plaster, has been placed on a temporary pedestal. The last book he looked into was Curtis' "Life of Buchanan," and the rough edges of the leaves, which he tore apart by running his thumb through them—for he never would use a paper-cutter—show how much he had read. He had not opened that part which related to himself at all. The chapter which he had hastily torn open was that headed: "Death of Mr. Buchanan; His Character as a Statesman, a Man and a Christian."

Worse than the River and Harbor Steal.

The combination in the House of Representatives to pass a multitude of bills for public buildings was powerful enough to suspend the rules, and thus to get a hearing for jobs which, had they been presented individually, would have died of inanition on the calendar.

The bills thus far reported favorably in the House, and those which have already passed the Senate and are now on the Speaker's table, concern thirty-two States. Some of these States get as many as four buildings. That number represents Pennsylvania's share. Texas is allowed three, New York two, Illinois two, Iowa two, Indiana two and Maine two. The other States in the Ring are content with one building apiece.

The bills of the House appropriate, in the aggregate, $6,068,000. Those of the Senate appropriate $2,871,000. There are several duplicates among the bills; if allowance is made for these, the total amount involved in the steal is about $8,000,000.

But as has been the history of the River and Harbor bills, they had at least a pretext for legislation in the estimates and reports from the Engineer Bureau. Those estimates were prepared at the instance of members of Congress interested in the jobs, and of course were the basis of the demand for appropriations. But in the case of these public building bills there is not even the form of a preliminary inquiry, and no sanction of the Executive Department to rest upon. The scheme is plainly one of general plunder, suggested by the existence of a huge surplus in the Treasury.

Representatives from the thirty-two States compare notes and agree among themselves upon a partition of the spoils. Democrats and Republicans go in alike for plunder. They vote solidly, and argument has no effect upon their convictions. The leader stands ready to move the previous question at a given signal, and the appropriation passes without even a record of the yeas and nays. The members individually cannot be held to account by their constituents.

This sort of logrolling has always brought discredit on those who have engaged in it. The present case will be no exception to the rule. The Democrats concerned in the raid ought to be ashamed of themselves.—N. Y. Sun.

Democratic Societies.

HON. CHAUNCEY F. BLACK'S LETTER TO THE JEFFERSONIAN CLUB.

From the Newark Journal.

The following letter of regret was received from the Hon. Chauncey F. Black in answer to the invitation of the Jefferson Club to be present at their banquet on Tuesday night. At the request of a number of gentlemen who have read it, the Journal publishes the letter in full:

YORK, Pa., April 10, 1884.—My Dear Sir: I had hoped that I would be able to respond in person to the kind invitation to be with you on the 15th at your celebration of the anniversary of Mr. Jefferson's birth, but I find, to my great regret, that on that day I will be detained at Harrisburg by official duties which can neither be delegated nor postponed.

But my heart is deep in the good work you are about. No sign of the times is more encouraging than the rapid increase in the number of political bodies like yours, known by the name of Jefferson, and devoted to the restoration of Jeffersonian principles and practices. Here is common ground upon which all democrats may meet in harmony, and the clubs themselves are that very expedient which Jefferson, Gallatin, Madison and their patriotic associates employed for the overthrow of federalism in their day.

The "democratic societies" of our republican forefathers were the centres of popular discussion and agitation. They became, as Mr. Jefferson said, the very "nurseries of republican principles." But for them our government of defined and delegated powers might then, upon its first severe trial, have been subverted—the written constitution might have been construed and "administrationed" away, for without them the triumph of the republican ticket in 1880 would hardly have been possible. But when the clubs thundered the people heard and the federalist trembled. The latter threatened prosecutions under the infamous sedition law, and even went so far as to propose an act of congress making it a crime to belong to a democratic society.

But neither the people's leaders, nor the people behind them, were dismayed. The democratic societies multiplied and flourished. They did their appointed work in that great struggle, and contributed powerfully to the deliverance of the country from the tyranny and corruption of federalism. Nor did they dissolve when they saw the votes put in the boxes; they remained, a vast array of intelligent and politically disciplined patriots, to see the votes honestly counted; to see the man elected by the people inaugurated, and to hold up his hands in the great work of reform which he was called to do. But for them, but for the vast chain of popular clubs united by common principles and inspired by a common purpose, ready to sound the alarm along the line, and to move in concert at the signal of danger, the Federalist plot to cheat the people and swindle Mr. Jefferson out of the presidency might have succeeded, as the similar plot to swindle Mr. Tilden did actually succeed, in 1877. Think you that if Jefferson associations had been relatively as numerous and strong in 1876 as were the democratic societies in 1800, the phenominal crime of 1877 would have been undertaken, or safely executed if it had been?

Are we any better prepared for 1885? Is anybody innocent enough to suppose, after the fraud of 1877, and the wholesale corruptions of 1880, that the federalist-republican party is going to step out of power merely because a majority of the people say that it shall do so? Its history encourages no such confidence in its integrity.

I am very truly yours, etc.,

CATARRH
Chronic Catarrh.

HAY-FEVER
The result of 25 years' catarrh:—the bridge, or division of my nose, was about half gone. I obtained a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm; have used four bottles, applying it to the affected parts with a swab, which has about cured up the nostrils. I had previously tried all other remedies on the market without permanent relief.—J. A. Wood, 96 N. High-st. Columbus, Ohio.
Ely's Cream Balm causes no pain. Gives relief at once. Cleanses the head. Causes healthy secretions. Abates inflammation. Prevents fresh colds. Heals the sores. Restores the senses of taste and smell. A thorough treatment will cure. Not a liquid or snuff. Applied with the finger. Send for circular. Sold by druggists. Mailed for 50c. ### Notice to Correspondents.

In order to save many communications from the waste basket we make the following suggestions to local correspondents: Use only one side of the sheet, and write as plain as possible; give only the local news that is of some interest to the community, such as accidents, improvements, marriages, deaths, matter relating to schools and churches, business enterprises, changes of residence, and the like. What appear to be jokes at the expense of others, and personal mention giving only one name or initials or a nickname, will not be printed under any circumstances. Such items often give offense, though none may be intended. The full name of the writer must always be given, but will not be printed unless requested. tf

E. L. Sharretts has just finished a three-year term of apprenticeship at the Republican office, and will be retained by his employers, which is a proof of his good workmanship. Ed. has served his time faithfully and well, and we wish him success in all his undertakings hereafter.

Everybody is crying "hard times"—we are doing first-class business. Why shouldn't people go and buy where they can buy the cheapest? We are bound to run our stock down so we will have room for Spring stock. Come early and take advantage of some bargains we are offering. LILLEY & SLEPPY.

As stated elsewhere, the price of the "History of Columbia County" has been reduced from $2.50 to $1.75, by mail 22 cents extra to pay postage. As the price seemed to be too high to allow of ready sale we were compelled to make this reduction or keep the books. We are now giving the agent's commission to the purchaser.

Call early, if you want the cheapest book for the money ever offered in this county.

Lilley & Sleppy at Orangeville, have the largest stock of gilt, mica, satin, white, black and brown back wall paper ever offered for sale in Orangeville.

New wall paper in the latest designs at G. A. Clark's.

The following is taken from the Hornellsville, N. Y. Daily in reference to the marriage of E. H. Witman and Miss Lilian Edgett, Wednesday morning April 10th.

Hornellsville has lost another of its most accomplished young ladies. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgett, on Bennett street, occurred the marriage of their daughter Lilian and Rev. E. H. Witman, of Duboistown, Pa., Rev. S. W. Lloyd performing the ceremony. A few of the especial friends of the family were present. Numerous presents from the friends of the parties added to the interest of the occasion. The reverend gentleman, who is to be highly congratulated on his good fortune, is a Methodist pastor in Pennsylvania, and a successful man in the ministry. He won the good will and wishes of those present at the wedding by his gentlemanly and cultured bearing. We are sorry to lose Miss Edgett from our place, and Park church choir and Sunday School as well as the family will greatly miss her, but we congratulate her upon her choice and the wide field of usefulness open to her. An elegant repast was served and the happy couple left on the noon train for their new home. Our good wishes follow them.

Largest stock of wall paper in the county, at G. A. Clark's.

Vacation Time.

The school term will soon be drawing to a close, and teachers are looking forward to the time when they will be released from their duties. We do not wonder at this. Hardly any profession causes more wear and tear upon health and temper than that of teaching school and no one who has not tried it can comprehend it to its full extent. It is needless to say how eagerly the boys and girls look forward to a release from their daily tasks, and the enjoyment of unlimited freedom. They do not seem to think now, what they are sure to learn in the future that these are the happiest days of their lives.

About Road Tax.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has rendered several decisions of general interest in the matter of road tax. The right of farmers to work out their road tax has been generally conceded, but supervisors in a few townships insist that the tax must be paid in money. A test case has been decided in favor of taxpayers, and their right to work out their tax distinctly and finally affirmed. In other cases collectors of the road tax have claimed a commission should be collected on the part worked out as well as that paid into the township treasury. The Supreme Court decided that all claims for such commissions should be rejected, the working out of a tax imposing no labor upon the collector or treasurer, but on the supervisor, who is paid for his services.

G. A. Clark's is the best place to buy wall paper because he has the largest assortment to select from.

Lilley & Sleppy's low prices are playing smash. Low prices are doing it.

Benton.

There is no use to cry hard times. Appleman & McHenry say they have already sold one-third the number of wagons they sold last year. There is no risk in getting a first-class wagon of them.

We think times are hard, yet it does not look so to see the rush at Rohr McHenry's store. He has just returned from the city with a large and well-selected stock of goods which he is selling at very low prices.

McHenry & Carey have opened a fine furniture store on the opposite side of the street from their former location.

We see our friend, J. J. McHenry, is making good use of the fishing season, as he came home to-day with a very large trout.

A new Ithaca five octave organ will be exchanged for a buggy. Inquire at this office.

Go West via. Pennsylvania railroad. All changes made in Union depots. No omnibus transfers. W. C. MCKINNEY, Ag't.

Plant Shade Trees.

A writer in one of our agricultural exchanges says: The importance of shade trees should under no circumstances be overlooked by the farmer, and where there is a vacant spot, where these gifts of nature can be given a location, it should be done. Now is the time to prepare for spring planting, and this should be accomplished as soon as the frost is out of the ground, and before the buds of the spring trees to be transplanted begin to swell. They can be used for both utility and ornament around farm dwellings, and they may be planted near the borders of cattle yards, thus affording the luxury of shade for domestic animals in very warm weather. In pastures trees can be set out in groups for the like purpose, especially when the fields are to remain permanently in grass. The cost is so unimportant that there is no excuse for its omission by any farmer. The prettiest country home is the one that is almost hidden from view by foliage.

Go to G. A. Clark's for your wall paper, and you cannot fail to be suited.

Potatoes are scarce. Lilley & Sleppy don't want any, but any other kind of produce they will take.

To Pension Applicants.

BLOOMSBURG, April 21, 1884.

EDS. COLUMBIAN:

The following letter not being a private one, and believing that it will be of great interest to a large class of your readers, I give you permission to insert, and mainly to save many soldiers from practical frauds and extortions. C. B. B.

WASHINGTON, D. C. March 7, 1884.

C. B. BROCKWAY, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Sir: In response to your letter of recent date, I desire to say that Messrs. N. W. Fitzgerald & Co., Claim Agents of this city, were on the 26th of December last, by direction of the Hon. Secretary of the Interior, suspended from practice upon information that the Grand Jury in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, had found an indictment against them for unlawful practices, growing out of the prosecution of claims for pensions, and in view of this fact claimants formerly represented by said firm, are, during the continuance of the order of suspension, at liberty of appointing new attorneys or prosecuting their respective claims in person.

Very Respectfully,
W. W. DUDLEY,
Commissioner.

Lilley & Sleppy have made a great cut in all kinds of goods, and will not be undersold. Granulated sugar, 9c.; Standard A., 9.,; white sugar, 8c.; a nice brown sugar, 4 lbs for 25c; all domestic ginghams, 10c and down; all cotton shirtings, 10c; calicoes, 5 and 6c dress goods—at cost. Call early and get a bargain.

FOR SALE.—A set of tinner's tools, apply to I. R. Rupert Bloomsburg, Pa. tf

Wreck on the Rupert Bridge.

The breaking of a car wheel threw a freight train off the track on the Rupert bridge last Friday night about 11 o'clock. Four cars loaded with lumber went through the bridge into the river. The timbers of the bridge were badly broken and repairs will take all of this week. The cars still remain in the river, but the lumber was floated down to the shops at Catawissa and tied. While the bridge was obstructed passengers were transferred from Catawissa to Rupert in wagons.

The best dirt-proof watches made can be seen at L. Bernhard's jewelry store.

Berwick.

The attention of your readers is called to the advertisements of B. F. Dreisbach, G. A. Buckingham and Levy & Co. They are live business men and country buyers visiting Berwick will do well to call on them before purchasing elsewhere.

The Rolling Mill is suspended for the present on account of lack of orders.

Geo. W. Pooler has been honored with and accepted an invitation to play at the Annual Concert and Contest of the graduates of Dickinson Seminary which takes place early in May at the Academy of Music, Williamsport.

C. D. Fowler is making a successful introduction of the "Butler" Safe.

The Wapwallopen Valley House, kept by G. W. Mauger, is a model country hotel. Everything from top to bottom is arranged with a view to afford the best and most complete accommodations to guests. It has been renovated and painted and presents many attractions to those seeking recreation in the neighborhood of Council Cup. The table, under the efficient lady of the house, is all that could be asked by the most fastidious.

Tom's COLUMBIAN echoes were extensively read by Berwick subscribers and will be continued as occasion shall suggest.

Dr. Michael, our new resident dentist, has taken up his quarters in the Hockman building and is ready for the patronage of his friends and the public.

Fred Boyer has made some changes in his hotel and is now prepared to accommodate the traveling public.

Three new applications are filed for license for the borough, and we presume will probably be granted.

The school term expires early next month and will be closed by a public entertainment in Association Hall.

Reduction in Price.

In the publication business, such as the COLUMBIAN has been engaged in, it is not advisable nor profitable to have much stock on hand, of any kind whatever. "Prompt sales and quick returns" is a sound business motto We find ourselves with a considerable portion of our edition of the "History of Columbia County," still unsold, and in agreement with the idea above expressed, desire to put them upon the market at such price as will be satisfactory to all parties. The book has heretofore been sold at a less price, comparatively, than most local histories; but our agents have usually reported to us that the price was in the way of extensive sales, although the book was in good demand, and could be readily sold at some reduction.

The commission allowed by us to our agents reduced the book to us, to as low a price as we could afford to sell it. In order therefore, that those who want the book may now procure it at such rate as they have expressed a readiness to buy it, and thus the buyer have the advantage of what we have heretofore paid to agents, the price of the book will hereafter be, as follows:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Bound in cloth, at our store | (old price $2.50) | $1.75. |
| " " ½ leather | " " | $2.00) $2.25. |
| " full leather | " " | $3.50) $2.50. |

and if sent by mail, post paid, twenty-two cents additional for postage.

This is undoubtedly the cheapest book that has ever been offered in this county, and there is every reason to our friends and subscribers that the book should be extensively bought and circulated. It is and will be an authority on the subjects about which it treats. As the names and dates and transactions therein recorded fade away from living memory, and the newspapers of the time are lost and destroyed, in the History will remain a living and contemporary report of many facts which greatly concerns many of you to know, and to know for certain. Not only to know but to have in the shape of a printed volume.

Centralia.

The work of putting in the pump at Logan is almost completed. The pump is a very large one, requiring a 14 inch column to receive the water. As the colliery very frequently suspended operations on account of high water, they will have no further trouble in that direction.

John Brennan, employed as a starter at Continental, had three of his fingers blown completely off, and his hand shattered in a frightful condition by an explosion of a Dualin cap which went off by some unknown cause in the young man's hand.

Work on the new nest of boilers has commenced at Logan. This will make in all, thirty boilers, and this number is barely able to supply the amount of steam required.

Twenty-two mules arrived here on Wednesday morning from Illinois, to be used by Riley & Co. at the collieries.

Thirty-three Hungarians occupied the rear car of the early train a few days ago en route for Sunbury. We don't care how many they ship in that direction, so long as they will not increase our supply of them. Over forty of the plagues are employed at Centralia colliery.

James I. Lake, foreman at the Logan colliery, is spending a few weeks in Boston, Mass.

Centralia colliery worked two days last week to fill the breaker.

Several parties are excavating back of the new school building preparatory to building.

Christ. Small has commenced operations on his new dwelling, which will be a model structure when completed.

A valuable cow belonging to Patrick McDonnell was killed on the railroad on Friday.

Contractors have commenced the sinking of a new slope at the Logan colliery.

Miss Mary Groody of Ashland, is spending a few days with Mrs. Daniel Curry.

A charter has been granted to the Ashland Electric Light Company. The work of erecting the buildings will be commenced at once.

Daniel Curry of town, and Schmicker of Shenandoah, will shoot a pigeon match for $100 a side, on the 30th of May.

Rev. T. J. McDermott of West Chester, spent part of the week with Rev. E. T. Field.

The Saving & Loan Association elected new officers on Monday evening for the ensuing year.

C. G. Murphy has added to his large stock of dry goods a large assortment of gents' clothing, which he will sell at very reasonable rates.

Town Organization.

In your issue of April 11th, 1884, we noticed an article on the above subject, referring chiefly to the recent applications of Catawissa and Orangeville for borough charters. We are unacquainted with the facts and circumstances attending the application of the people of Orangeville, so will have nothing whatever to say concerning their case. We do desire, however, to correct several misstatements of facts concerning the application from Catawissa; and, in doing this, let it be understood that there is no disposition to censure the eminent author of the article, who would have no interest, and much less, any inclination or desire to state what was not strictly correct. His information has evidently come from those most interested in opposing the borough movement, and has either been collected in a grossly careless manner or with an intention to wilfully misrepresent the facts for the purpose of misleading the over-credulous reader.

It is not correct that the opposition came mainly from citizens of the township outside of the proposed borough. Every one who has any reliable information concerning the borough movement here knows that it was mainly opposed by six individuals, all of whom live within the limits of the proposed borough, and that there was only one man in the township who took any decided stand with the opposition, while on the other hand a majority of the leading citizens in the township have expressed themselves as being in favor of incorporation.

The township of Catawissa, outside the limits of the proposed borough, would contain 14 square miles or 8960 acres of territory, and would not be left in the form of a shell or crescent. The Western boundary of the proposed borough is the Susquehanna river, which is also the boundary line of the township; and the southern boundary of the proposed borough is, for a considerable distance, the line between Catawissa and Franklin townships, and when it leaves the township line it follows the base of a high mountain—a natural boundary—the remaining distance, so that the proposed borough is taken from the corner of the township in a manner that will not inconvenience any one in any respect. If the borough is erected there will be about 85 resident land owners left in the township with enough nonresidents who own properties there to make the number 100, and some of these non-residents own the largest and most valuable farms in the township and consequently are among the heaviest tax payers there. Some of these very persons are most strongly in favor of a borough—strange and startling as it may appear to the opposition. These citizens of the township will only be obliged to maintain 21½ miles of road outside of the proposed borough limits, instead of 30 miles as erroneously stated in the article before referred to. There are only 29 miles in the whole township as now constituted and 7½ miles are within the limits of the proposed borough. The foregoing statements, it seems, would show very clearly that the parties who are most earnestly opposing the present movement to incorporate the town of Catawissa are not sincere in what they say or do, or they would not resort to misrepresentation of facts. They pretend to present a new plan, ostensibly, to incorporate the whole township of Catawissa, when in fact and at heart the whole opposition are unfavorable to incorporation of any kind, unless their words and actions go for nought. It is a plan which, if waited for and followed, means never to incorporate. It is a last resort on behalf of the opposition, the purpose and design of which is to dissuade the public-spirited citizens from making a much needed improvement in their town here and now which the opposition fears is becoming formidable and which they know will soon be inevitable. It is a cunningly devised scheme by which they hope to mislead the doubtful and unwary citizen and cause him to abandon the well-begun project altogether. Be not deceived or misguided by this new device of the opposition. We have statutes prescribing the manner for the incorporation of boroughs which have been practiced successfully and effectually almost time out of mind—we have a town that is much too large to be well regulated, or regulated at all, by township government—we have a majority of the freeholders residing within the limits of the proposed borough who are heartily in favor of incorporation—why then sit here in the mud and filth and wait for legislation that may never be agitated or enacted? Special legislation, such as incorporated the Town of Bloomsburg, is prohibited by the new constitution and if ever "a general permissive law," such as contemplated by Mr. Buckalew, should be passed, the only mode of procedure to incorporate under such a law will be just the same as now, viz: by petition of a majority of the freeholders to the court of the county, consequently nothing whatever will be gained by waiting, while on the other hand, the longer incorporation is delayed the more expense will attend the grading and regulation of streets.

So, let the citizens of Catawissa who are most interested in the building up and improvement of their town, move right forward in this matter and have their town incorporated and then they will be in proper shape to be benefited by any new legislation that may be enacted for the better regulation of incorporations of this kind. INCORPORATE.

Work is scarce, loafers plenty, and as a consequence business is dull.

We called upon our bachelor friend, Clark Roat, the other afternoon and found him as pleasant and contented as ever. He speaks very highly of potatoes and onions in the cultivation of which he is largely engaged. He also delights in keeping his well furnished rooms neat and clean. We were surprised to find how comfortable and happy Clark lived. Having his floors well carpeted, his walls lately papered and adorned with beautiful and costly pictures, his furniture made of the best material and latest style. It is his desire that his many friends should call frequently to see him during the summer season, especially those belonging to the gentle sex. From his talk, we infer that the sentiment of his heart runs parallel with that of the poetess, where she says:

"Come in the evening, or come in the morning,
Come when you are looked for, or come without warning;
Kisses and welcome are here before you,
And the more you come here, the more I'll adore you."

Council Proceedings.

BLOOMSBURG, April 18, 1884.

Council met in special session, all the members present.

On motion of Mr. Hagenbuch, a portion of the north side of the town park—20 feet wide and 80 feet long was rented to Creasy and Robbins for the term of four months from this date for the sum of five dollars. Upon motion of Mr. Rabb the president of council was authorized to rent the balance of the town park to the highest bidder. The town treasurer's bond was read and upon motion accepted.

Mr. Hagenbuch moved that a ten mill tax be levied on the "built up" property in the town of Bloomsburg; Mr. Sharpless seconded the motion. Mr. Sterling moved to amend by making it nine mills. Wm. Rabb seconded amendment. Mr. Moyer moved to amend the amendment by fixing it at twelve mills. Mr. Sharpless seconded motion of amendment to amendment. On motion of Mr. Sterling the yeas and nays were called on the last motion which resulted as follows: yeas, Messrs. Rabb and Sterling—2; nays, Messrs. Hagenbuch, Jones, Sharpless and Moyer—4. The yeas and nays were then ordered on the original motion, and resulted as follows: yeas, Messrs. Jones, Hagenbuch, Sharpless, Moyer and Rupert—5; nays, Messrs. Sterling and Rabb—2; fixing the tax rate at 10 mills. On motion adjourned to Monday April 21st.

APRIL 21st, 1884.

Adjourned meeting, all members present.

On motion of Mr. Sterling and seconded by Mr. Rabb, the following resolution was unanimously passed.

Resolved, That the president of Council be chairman of a committee of three to see D. J. Waller with reference to the sale of the town park and to get his acceptance or refusal to purchase the same. The president appointed Messrs. Sterling and Sharpless to act in connection with himself on the committee.

A petition was read, signed by a large number of property owners on East street, asking the Council to take some action with reference to the rights of lot owners to build fence along the terrace of that street. On motion of Mr. Sterling and seconded by Mr. Rabb, the Council formed themselves into a committee of the whole to meet the Street Commissioner on East street at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, April 26th, to investigate the matter with reference to the requests of the said petitioners.

Mr. Sharpless moved that the following resolution be adopted: Resolved, that the Town proceed to complete or secure the completion of the main sewer down Market street and Kinney's run to the Susquehanna river, and in accordance with the specifications approved by the Town Council on the 27th day of November, 1883. Mr. Hagenbuch seconded the motion. Upon call of yeas and nays the following was the result: yeas, Messrs. Sharpless, Hagenbuch, Moyer and Rupert—4; nays, Messrs. Sterling and Rabb—2; Mr. Jones refused to vote.

Mr. Hagenbuch moved the adoption of the following resolution: Resolved, that the town accept the sewer pipe under the canal from the trustees of the Bloomsburg State Normal School, and that the cost thereof as certified by the president of said Board of Trustees be credited upon the amount due from the Normal School to the Town upon sewer contract dated the third day of December, A. D. 1883. Seconded by Mr. Sharpless. Result of vote: yeas, Messrs. Moyer, Hagenbuch, Sharpless, Jones and Rupert—5; nays, Messrs. Sterling and Rabb—2.

Mr. Hagenbuch moved, and Mr. Moyer seconded motion for the adoption of the following resolution, to-wit: Resolved, that a committee consisting of L. B. Rupert, L. T. Sharpless and L. E. Waller, solicitor, be appointed to investigate the matter and form of issuing bonds, and the amount required, and report at the next meeting of Council. The yeas and nays being called gave the following result: yeas, Messrs. Moyer, Jones, Sharpless, Hagenbuch and Rupert—5; nays, Messrs. Rabb and Sterling—2.

Mr. Sharpless submitted the following resolution and Mr. Hagenbuch moved its adoption, to-wit: Resolved, that the secretary of Council prepare a statement of bills passed April 9th, 1884, together with a list of claims on file and not included in the financial statement made by the Council retiring April 1st, 1884. Yeas, Messrs. Moyer, Jones, Hagenbuch, Sharpless and Rupert—5; nays, Messrs. Sterling and Rabb—2.

Mr. Hagenbuch moved that the statement as prepared by Secretary be publish ed. Mr. Sterling moved to amend the motion by allowing all bills for sewer pipe to be left out of statement, that a large number of sewer pipe are on hand that were never ordered, and the bills of the claims are on file for said pipe. Mr. Rabb seconded motion of amendment. For amendment, yeas, Messrs. Rabb, Jones, and Sterling—3; nays, Messrs. Sharpless, Hagenbuch, Moyer and Rupert, 4. The yeas and nays to original motion were, yeas, Messrs Jones, Moyer, Hagenbuch, Sharpless and Rupert—5; nays, Messrs Rabb and Sterling—2.

Mr. Hagenbuch moved that the agreement between the Pennsylvania Canal Company and the town of Bloomsburg, with reference to laying a sewer pipe under said canal at Market street, be accepted and signed by the President and Secretary of Town Council. Mr. Sharpless seconded the motion. Yeas, Messrs. Moyer, Hagenbuch, Sharpless, Jones and Rupert—5; nays, Messrs. Rabb and Sterling—2.

On motion council adjourned.

Mr. John H. Phelps—Dear Sir: I have used your Rheumatic Elixir with good results and can recommend it to any person suffering with that fearful disease, rheumatism. CHAS. W. SMITH, Hatter.

TELLS WHAT HE KNOWS.

"Best thing for burns I have ever tried. Heals up grandly." L. P Follett, Marion, Ohio, speaking of Thomas Eclectric Oil.

The Phelps' Rheumatic Elixir for me has always acted like a charm. I think this fall it cut short a severe attack of Rheumatism. I can endorse the remedy either as a preventive or cure. Yours truly,
MRS. G. W. PALMER,
Glenburn, Pa.

(Note.—Mrs. G. W. Palmer is the mother of Hon. Henry W. Palmer, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., ex-State Attorney General of Penna.)

INSURANCE.

Insurance is a good thing whether applied to life or property. No less a blessing is anything that insures good health. Kidney-Wort does this. It is nature's great remedy. It is a mild but efficient cathartic, and acting at the same time on the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels, it relieves all these organs and enables them to perform their duties perfectly. It has wonderful power. See adv't.

WANT OF FAITH.

If C. A. Klein, the Druggist, does not succeed it is not for the want of faith. He has such faith in Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung syrup as a remedy for Coughs, Colds, Consumption, and Lung Affections, that he gives a bottle free to each and every one who is in need of a medicine of this kind. A person with impaired or impoverished blood is on the road to physical bankruptcy. Burdock Blood Bitters strengthen and enrich the circulation, repair the tissues, and build up the entire system.

CARES OF LIFE.

As we come to them they are received, borne with, and passed over with no more than a thought, if we are in the enjoyment of health, but if suffering with Piles or skin disease of any kind they magnify a hundred fold. C. A. Klein, the Druggist, has Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy which is an absolute cure for any affection of the kind and is sold for 50cents. July 13-eow

GRAPE JUICE.

The art of fermenting the Oporto Grape into wine in this country has been brought to a greater degree of perfection by Mr. Alfred Speer, of New Jersey, than by any other person. The Claret and Burgundy are very popular as dinner wines and the Port and Burgundy as evening wines as well as for the table and for invalids. For sale by druggists.

ANDREW DESMOND'S PRAISES.

Dear Sir—I lay on my side for four long months without any relief until I commenced taking Phelps' Rheumatic Elixir. It is the best medicine I ever used. To-day is the best day I have seen in twelve months. I thank you and God Almighty and no one else for my relief. I have lived and done public business in Geneva, N. Y., for the last twenty, therefore have many acquaintances that call around and see me daily and to ask about Phelps' Elixir for themselves or for some of their friends. I praise it highly. You do the talking and sign my name as my tongue could not do it justice.

As a superb hair dressing and renovator Ayer's Hair Vigor is universally commended. It eradicates scurf and dandruff, cures all eruptions and itchings of the scalp, promotes the renewed growth of the hair, and surely prevents its fading or turning gray.

OPENING THE FOUNTAINS.

In numberless bulbs beneath the skin is secreted the liquid substance which gives the hair its texture, color and gloss. When this secretion stops, the hair begins at once to become dry, lustreless, brittle and gray. Is that the condition of your hair? If so, apply Parker's Hair Balsam at once. It will restore the color, gloss and life by renewing the action of nature. The Balsam is not an oil, not a dye, but an elegant toilet article, highly appreciated because of its cleanliness.

It seems probable that Mr. Michael O'Connor, of Galesburg, Ill., is not related to the celebrated Charles O'Connor. He says: "Samaritan Nervine cured me of dyspepsia and general debility."

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

At times symptoms of indigestion are present, uneasiness of the stomach, &c., a moisture like perspiration, producing itching at night, or when one is warm, cause the Piles. The effect is immediate relief upon the application of Dr. Basanko's Pile Remedy, which costs you but 50 cents and is sold by C. A. Klein. July 13-eow

LET US TELL YOU.

A Tragic Event.

A FATHER'S DESPAIR AND SELF-INFLICTED DEATH. HIS SON'S FINAL RESCUE, TOO LATE TO SAVE HIS PARENT.

The graphic occurrences that is described below is one of the most remarkable episodes in the domestic history of America It is absolute truth which can readily be verified.

The inhabitants of the pleasant town of Cortland, N. Y., were shocked one morning by the announcement that Mr. Clinton Rindge, one of their most prominent citizens, had committed suicide. The news spread rapidly and aroused the entire neighborhood where Mr. Rindge was so well and favorably known. At first it seemed impossible that any one so quiet and domestic could do so rash a deed, and the inquiry was heard on every side as to the cause. The facts as developed on investigation proved to be as follows:

Mr. Rindge was domestic in his tastes and took the greatest enjoyment in the society of his children and pride in their development. And indeed he had good reason to be proud for they gave promise of long lives of success and usefulness. But an evil day came. His youngest son, William, began to show signs of an early decay. He felt unusually tired each day, and would sometimes sleep the entire afternoon if permitted to do so. His head pained him, not acutely, but with a dull, heavy feeling. There was a sinking sensation at the pit of his stomach. He lost all relish for food and much of his interest for things about him. He tried manfully to overcome these feelings, but they seemed stronger than his will. He began to lose flesh rapidly. The father became alarmed and consulted physicians as to the cause of his son's illness, but they were unable to explain. Finally severe sores broke out on his arms and he was taken to Buffalo where a paintul operation was performed resulting in the loss of much blood but affording little relief. The young man returned home and a council of physicians was called. After an exhaustive examination they declared there was no hope of final recovery and that he must die within a very few days. To describe the agony which this announcement caused the father would be impossible. His mind failed to grasp its full meaning at first; then finally seemed to comprehend it, but the load was too great. In an agony of frenzy he seized a knife and took his own life, preferring death rather than to survive his idolized son. At that time William Rindge was too weak to know what was transpiring. His face had turned black, his breath ceased entirely at times, all his friends waited for his death believing that the fiend Bright's disease of the kidneys, from which he was suffering, could not be removed. In this supreme moment William's, sister came forward and declared she would make a final attempt to save her brother. The doctors interposed, assuring her that it was useless and that she would only hasten the end by the means she proposed to employ. But she was firm, and putting all back, approached her brother's side and administered a remedy which she fortunately had on hand. Within an hour he seemed more easy, and before the day was over he showed signs of decided improvement. These favorable signs continued, and to-day William B. Rindge is well, having been virtually raised from the dead through the marvelous power of Warner's Safe Cure, as can be readily verified by any citizen of Cortland.

Any one who reflects upon the facts above described must have a feeling of sadness. The father dead by his own hand, supposing his son's recovery to be impossible; the son restored to health to mourn the loss of his father and the agonized relatives with a memory of sadness to forever darken their lives. Had Clinton Rindge known that his son could recover he would to day be alive and happy, but the facts which turned his brain and caused him to commit suicide were such as any one would accept as true.

However sad this case may be, the truth remains that thousands of people are at this moment in as great actual peril as William Rindge and in as great danger of causing misery if not death to their friends. Liver and kidney diseases are become the most common and most dangerous of any or all modern complaints. They are the most deceptive in their beginnings and horrible in their final stages. They are far more deceptive than Consumption, and can rarely be detected even by skillful physicians unless a microscopic analysis be resorted to, and few doctors understand how to do this. Their slightest approach, or possibility of approach should strike terror to the one who is threatened as well as to all his or her friends. These diseases have no distinct symptoms, but come in the form of lassitude, loss of appetite, aching muscles and joints, dull headaches, pains in the back, stomach and chest, sour stomach, recurring signs of cold, irregular pulsations of the heart, and frequent dizziness. If neglected, these symptoms are certain to run into chronic kidney and liver or Bright's disease, from which there is sure to be a great amount of agony and only one means of escape which is by the use of Warner's Safe Cure. The importance of taking this great remedy upon the slightest appearance of any of the above symptoms cannot be too strongly impressed upon the minds of all readers who desire to escape death and pain and prolong life with all its pleasures and blessings.

South Carolina Starving.

HER BLACK AND WHITE FARMERS IN DESTITUTION AND MISERY.

A correspondent to the New York Sun dated Beldoc, S. C., April 13, gives the following account of the suffering people of South Carolina:

Because no voice has been lifted in a cry for aid, the great world does not know that the people of a State, one of the old thirteen, are now undergoing privations unparalelled in her history. Such silence under such suffering is only accounted for by a knowledge of that singular stoicism which seems an inherent trait with these people.

From the northern boundary of the State among the mountains, to its southern line on the Atlantic coast, a drought prevailed from May until December. The scorching sun withered the green fields, until hundreds of acres were known to yield only as many ears of corn. Many left the stunted, parched plants as unfit for even the consumption of beasts. The withering, scorching winds seemed laden with malarious poison, and fevers distressed the ruined farmers.

The fall crops were planted only in the low bottoms, besides those streams that were not dried up, and even these failed to produce more than the cost of planting. In many localities water became a precious commodity, and a bucketful was given and received as a valuable boon. Far into midwinter this scarcity continued. With the greatest difficulty winter grain was sown, but the first crop was almost universally a failure. Later on, in February, a better stand was obtained, and now those who could afford to buy the seed have hopes of a partial supply of forage for their animals.

The writer questioned a prominent business man in Barnwell county. "My section," he said, "could have weathered it through had the merchants been able to stand the pressure. You see, they had advanced supplies to the farmers, taking the liens on the growing crops. These crops were turned into parched strings, and the merchants were left with their liens, which, by the law, are only good for the crop on which they were taken. The merchants as a rule are not rich, but get their goods on credit from the city commission factories and merchants. They pay these in the fall, after the liens are paid. See yonder, that big store is closed, and there over the way they are selling out P & N. That will be the way for the next twelve months. I know half a dozen merchants in this little place who, by hard work, have obtained an extension of time till next November. It is only a delay of the trouble. I suppose the city factories are selling out these men because these became baubles. Just so. Sometimes, however, it is done by large houses North, by men who credited here heavily. Now, there is a result upon the people from these failures that is like the fresh application of fire to a burn. The majority of the people depend upon these merchants for their supplies until the fall of each year. These supplies are now necessarily cut off in hundreds of cases. Any man who can put two and two together knows what is coming."

He uttered the last sentence with a gulp that was very like a sob, and turned on his heel and walked away.

"Go out into the country," said one in another county, "if you would know the condition of the people. Why, there are people with large plantations who are so hedged in that bread is barely attainable."

A lady reluctantly admitted that the supply of bread was so scant that her family were trying to find sufficient to sustain life by eating the few vegetables they had raised, and this without meat of any kind. The greatest of the suffering, however, falls upon the small farmers of both races, and those who had worked by the mode known as day labor.

A small farmer, well known and respected, said: "I had something to live upon till Christmas. Since then I don't know how we have lived. Many times there is not a mouthful to eat in the house. I have kept my horse alive by picking moss from the trees till the grass grew, and now he lives on that, but he is nothing but skin and bones."

"Is there no possible relief for you from this distress?" we inquired.

"There will be none until April," he replied, "and the merchant who has always advanced to me will let me have supplies enough to keep soul and body together until I can make a crop. He can't do more than this, for he is almost broke himself."

"Have you no friends to help you?"

"We have one friend who would help us, if she could know, but we can't get to her. She has moved away."

The man's half famished face and figure told a sadder story even than his words. In the humble room sat his wife and her mother, both confirmed invalids, and in the next apartment was his daughter, lying on the bed, where, in great pain, she had spent several years. We learned that this man's industrious habits and character were the means of his obtaining the promise of help. Unless it comes speedily it will be of no avail.

"Are there other cases like that?" we asked, pointing to the house just left.

"That is only one of many. Go on the highways and look at the people's faces. They never looked so before. Even the children are sad."

The writer has been in four counties in the lower part of South Carolina of late, and the same story is repeated in them all. The perilous times have brought to light the usual vampire, who feeds on blood and calamity in the shape of the extortioner. Men are hard to each other, because the stress for bread robs them of feeling for others. There are cases that show how human nature can soar above selfishness, and yield up its own for others. The instances where assistance is given the negroes from the whites, and where the whites receive aid from the blacks, are frequent and touching.

Now, if ever, is the time when the Northern heart should throb in benevolence for the Southern blacks. Midsummer is the hardest season in the South for the farmer. If in spring the cry for bread resounds in hushed tones there will be no concealment in June, when help must come lest starvation ensues. Aiken, Barnwell, Colleton, Hampton, Beaufort, Charleston, and Orange are among the counties that are suffering. It would not be shirking the truth to say that there is scarcely a county which is not now sharing the general calamity. There will be need of help, but it should come from home. South Carolina has moneyed men enough to keep her needy from an appeal to those without her boundaries.

SPEER'S

PORTUGAL GRAPE WINE

Also

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.

Used in the principal Churches for Communion. Excellent for Females, Weakly Persons and the Aged.

EXCELLENT FOR FEMALES AND WEAKLY PERSONS.

Speer's Port Grape Wine!

FOUR YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED WINE is the pure juice of the dead ripe Oporto Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards. Its invaluable,

Tonic and Strengthening Properties

are unsurpassed by any other Wine. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness, are guaranteed by the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have examined it. The youngest child may partake of it, and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex.

It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice.

Is the juice of the Oporto Grapes preserved in its natural, fresh, sweet state as it runs from the press by fumigation, thereby destroying the exciter of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits and will keep in any climate.

Speer's Burgundy.

Is a dark rich medium Dry Wine used by the wealthy classes as a Table or Dinner Wine, and by physicians in cases where a dry wine instead of a sweet port is desired.

Speer's (Socialite) Claret.

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J Sherry.

Is a wine of Superior Character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy.

IS A PURE distillation from the grape, and stands unrivalled in this Country for medicinal purposes.

It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.
